

Everglades National Park

Everglades National Park was established and dedicated by President Harry S. Truman on December 6, 1947. It is located in Florida and contains an immense subtropical wilderness with mangrove swamps and rare birds and wild animals.