

Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit

Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit was the German physicist who invented the first practical thermometer, the mercury thermometer in 1714. In 1724, he developed the scale of temperature that bears his name, the Fahrenheit Scale.

Fahrenheit was born on May 14, 1686 in Danzig, Poland, and died on September 16, 1736, in Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Image: George Marks/Getty Images